FIRST TECH CREDIT UNION ADDS SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT, MORTGAGE LENDING

Beaverton, Ore., and Mountain View, Calif. – April 9, 2014 – First Tech Federal Credit Union, the nation’s premier credit union serving technology companies, announces Jeremy Walker as its new senior vice president, mortgage lending. Walker will set and execute the mortgage lending strategy while leading a high performing mortgage management team. He’ll also be responsible for all facets of mortgage operation and sales.

“Jeremy Walker is a fantastic addition to our growing team,” said Greg Mitchell, president and CEO of First Tech. “His wealth of experience within the retail mortgage industry, his impressive sales growth and his management track records are representative of the tremendous value he will provide our members. We are excited for him to drive efforts around product and process innovation and superior service delivery.”

Walker brings 18 years of executive mortgage lending expertise from coast-to-coast, including 12 years as a senior vice president within the Bank of America retail mortgage group in Virginia and later the Pacific Northwest. A graduate of Gardner Webb University, summa cum laude, he also earned a master’s degree in retail bank management with honors at the University of Virginia.
